“Pick one element for a focal point and make it great — the ‘ooh’ factor.”

Personable and communicative with an excellent eye for detail, Lindsey Thompson is a designer at our Harbor Springs location.

Just for fun, Lindsey took a drafting class in high school, but there she quickly fell in love with house planning. She took advanced drafting in her senior year and won 2nd place for her home design in the Michigan Technological Education Society state competition.

Lindsey earned an Associates degree in Architectural Construction Technology from Baker College. Her first job out of college was in kitchen design, then she worked for six years as an architectural associate and describes that experience as “immeasurable.” Although she was involved in all aspects of home planning, she excelled at kitchen planning and electrical/lighting plans. Most of her experience is in custom residential but she has also worked on commercial projects.

Lindsey is personable and a good relationship builder. She likes to get to know her clients well to gain insights and creative inspiration. She defines great design as timeless and durable with staying power and a bold element for the “ooh” factor. Great design makes life easier for those who live there.

The design and construction process can be overwhelming and stressful for homeowners. Remodeling, especially, can bring major upheavals in daily living. Lindsey works hard to prepare and guide the homeowners through the process and make this gap as small as possible for them.

Lindsey loves the four seasons and the abundance of activities available in this part of the world. Words she uses to describe Northern Michigan Style: “Casual, light, open, timeless and airy.”

FUN FACT: At one time, Lindsey had 12 barn cats.
